* The simulated analysis before launch date was created using Morningstar and is for illustrative purposes only. It provides an indication of hypothetical past performance given historic asset and manager allocation, and cannot be construed as providing an indication of expected future performance. The investor is liable for CGT on any transactions in the units of the underlying unit trusts within the wrap funds. Compulsory investments are not subject to CGT. Performance is calculated using net returns (after fees) of the underlying unit trusts, and quoted excluding wrap fund fees. Performance quoted is pre-tax. Fund performance numbers shown are for a notional portfolio and do not reflect the actual performance of the client invested in the wrap fund due to timing differences of investments or disinvestments of the client. Benchmark returns for CPI are based on actual published returns and an estimated one month return for the month of the report date. ASISA Benchmark returns are the ASISA returns available as at the time of reporting.

Manager Comment

The World Bank highlighted that global growth is set to slow over the next two years as central banks raise borrowing rates and fiscal stimulus starts to fade in countries such as the US and China. Furthermore, halfway through 2018, markets have not exactly performed as many expected. Worries that a full-blown trade war will break out between the US and key trading partners continue to weigh on emerging market currencies and risk assets. Easing political concerns in Europe and a more dovish ECB did little to cushion the sell-off of emerging market assets. The Fed raised interest rates for the second time this year, as expected, but also signalled that it expected two further increases in 2018 – one more than it had previously forecast. The ECB, meanwhile, said it planned to halt its quantitative easing programme in December, but said interest rates were unlikely to rise in the foreseeable future.

Most of the gains from developed equity markets in the first half of the month were wiped out by renewed global trade war concerns and more protectionism across major trading partners. Rising trade tensions hurt investor sentiment and saw emerging market currencies depreciate relative to the dollar and a broad-based sell-off in emerging market risk assets. As such, the rand relative to the dollar depreciated by some 7.60% during the month of June. The MSCI World index was marginally down in dollar terms, delivering -0.05%, while the MSCI EM index delivered -4.13% in dollars. The Fed rate hike and a nearly 3% US 10-year yield during the month disrupted financial markets outside the US. The 10-year yield closed at 2.94% mid-month and eased to 2.83% at month-end. As such, the JP Morgan Global Aggregate index delivered -0.28% in dollars. For emerging market debt the backdrop of more protectionist rhetoric and a stronger dollar was less rosy as the JP Morgan EM index delivered -1.03% in dollars. Global listed property in regions like Hong Kong, Japan, and Singapore came under pressure in the month of June, while the US rallied and contributed 2.15% to the asset class total return. As such, despite valuations marginally deteriorating, the EPRA/NAREIT Developed Markets Property index delivered 1.57% in dollars.

The local equity market followed suit of emerging equity markets, but recovered strongly in the last week of June with the ALSI index gaining 2.78% in rands. A strong month for Resource and Industrial shares helped the local market post positive returns. As such the Resi20 index and Indi25 index delivered 6.40% and 4.88% respectively. The Fini15 bucked the trend, delivering -2.84% for the month of June. Foreigners were net sellers of the local bond market to the tune of R30.33bn during the month, as investors remain concerned about the recurring theme related to the reversal of 'easy money'. The SA 10-year yield pushed 29 bps higher and settled at 9.04% at month end. As such, the ALBI delivered -1.17% in rands. Inflation-linked bonds underperformed their sovereign counterparts, delivering -2.11% in rands and -9.54% in dollars. The local listed property market came under pressure as bond yields pushed higher. As such, the SAPY index delivered -3.45% in rands and -10.79% in dollars. Furthermore, local cash returned 0.57% for the month.

Investment Committee

The investment committee forms an integral part of the investment management process. The investment committee members are involved in the process of multi management by participating in the Investment Committee Framework (the "Framework"). This Framework provides intermediaries with a platform to share their research and views with qualified investment professionals who will, based on certain constraints, construct a portfolio taking the intermediary's research into account.
